In Memoriam

Professor of Law
Seton Hall University School of Law

The Savannah Law Review dedicates this issue to the memory of Professor Marc Poirier. We were fortunate to have Marc’s thoughtful dialogue as a part of a panel, The Impact of Property Rights on Civil Rights, during our colloquium, [Re]Integrating Spaces. He spoke about his ongoing work on memorial sites for the gay rights struggle. This work comprised part of his tireless efforts to advance the progressive property movement in the law. His meaningful scholarship ranged from property theory, environmental law, and sexuality law. Marc was larger than life in teaching, scholarship, and friendship. He was charitable to all with his heart, mind, and time. His intellectual curiosity and hope for progress were contagious. His vivacity for life and learning will live on in us and in his work.
